To whom it may concern:

The Department of Health and Welfare received funding through the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security (CARES) Act to support some of the food insecurity programs administered by DHW. The funding was limited to providing additional SNAP dollars to SNAP eligible families, providing funding for free/reduced lunch eligible children who were impacted by school closures, and providing additional funding for The Emergency Food Assistance Program (TEFAP) contractors to increase food commodities.

The funding from the CARES Act to the Department of Health and Welfare did not include funding for any food bank programs. With the increase in food insecurity during the pandemic, partners and non-profits who operate food banks and food assistance programs have seen an increase in demand. Since available funding for these partners was not made available through the appropriations received directly to the Department of Health and Welfare, we support State distributed CARES funding to support local community food needs.

The Department supports the request for additional funding to any food distribution program.

Sincerely,

Funding Request and Corresponding Summary Data

The Idaho Foodbank serves Idaho families, seniors and children who are considered food insecure – meaning that, at times they lack the food they need to live healthy, active lives. This can include those who are living below the federal poverty line and may qualify for assistance programs such as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP). It also includes individuals who are struggling to make ends meet but do not qualify for assistance programs based on income. In fact, in Idaho, more than 50 percent of people who are food insecure may not qualify for SNAP due to their income level (Map the Meal Gap study, <https://idahofoodbank.org/about/food-insecurity-in-idaho/>). This finding underscores the importance of protecting and strengthening the safety net of public food assistance while also investing in charitable programs that help to fill the gap for people who don't qualify.

The Idaho Foodbank (The Foodbank) has faced the challenge of COVID-19 by continuing all operations statewide, monitoring the increasing levels of food insecurity at a county and community level, and dramatically increasing the amount of free food we are distributing across the state. As an example, The Foodbank has added 15 Community Food Distributions each month to supplement our regular programming. Some of these community distributions have served 1,500 households in the span of just four hours. The original goal for the fiscal year, prior to the pandemic was to provide 22 million pounds of food to the state, now we are on pace to provide 29 million pounds based on current trends.

While we are relieved that we have been able to respond to these needs since March, we have concerns about the sustainability of this service level given the increased costs. We are also concerned about a possible need to increase our services as the pandemic continues. The most recent data projections from Map the Meal Gap, formulated from data based in the Great Recession, outlines a concerning level of possible food insecurity due to the pandemic and higher or sustained unemployment. The study shows a potential impact of 1 in 6 people in Idaho, including 1 in 4 of our children, facing food insecurity. Though we have not seen this level of demand to date, it is critical that nonprofits and state agencies be prepared to respond to a significant increase in the need for food assistance. If demand rises to this crisis level, we would appreciate further discussion with State leadership.

The Foodbank serves every county in Idaho through a variety of food programs. That said, because of proximity and ease of access, Second Harvest Inland Northwest, based in Spokane, Washington, also serves the five counties in the North Idaho panhandle, while the remaining part of the state is served only by The Idaho Foodbank. Both are members of the Feeding America national food bank network and share a vision to get food to those who need it most. Second Harvest currently provides food in Boundary, Bonner, Kootenai, Benewah and Shoshone counties. Food reaches people in need in north Idaho through 32 partner food pantries and meal sites, along with additional school pantries, backpack programs and Second Harvest's own Mobile Market free food distributions. Acknowledging this partnership across state lines, information is separated for north Idaho (top five counties) and the remainder of the state of Idaho which is The Foodbank's primary service area.

We have jointly recognized a need in northern Idaho's top five counties that is not being adequately met. Based on our findings from Second Harvest and through communication with the 32 nonprofit organizations aiming to meet the hunger relief needs for the region, the current distribution has been increased by 18%. The Idaho Foodbank's goal is to increase distribution by 30%, and all research indicates this goal is appropriate to extend to the entire state including the top five counties.

The federal Coronavirus Farmer Assistance Program (CFAP) has had a significant impact by providing food to families through The Foodbank's warehouses, Mobile Pantries, partner organizations and the newly created Community Food Distributions. The federal funding for this program was planned to last through December 2020, however per a press release from the USDA on July 24, the funding allotted for the program will be spent as of October 31, 2020. As such, the expense outline below includes CFAP costs to replace the Community Food Distribution program which is currently serving an average of 7,600 households each month (expenses include distributions in Nov. - Dec.). We will continue to monitor the community and county needs over the coming months to assess if additional food resources are needed.

The outlined Funding Request is based on projections through December 2020. It is noteworthy to share in a typical year The Foodbank spends just over $200,000 on the purchase of food, to date since March we have spent nearly one million dollars.

With the research and our understanding from more than 444 organizations serving every county across the state of Idaho that showcases a need for a heightened level of emergency food to serve the families and individuals now through December 2020, we are asking the State to support this funding request from The Idaho Foodbank. This funding will ensure we can work to meet the level of service needed for food-insecure Idahoans during these challenging and unpredictable times.

Sincerely,

Karen L. Vauk
President & CEO

GiraffeLaugh Early Learning Centers

August 10, 2020

To Governor Little's Coronavirus Financial Advisory Committee,

As the executive director of Giraffe Laugh Early Learning Centers, I would like to express my strong support for the Idaho Foodbank's request for support of COVID relief funds through the state of Idaho to support hunger relief across our state. Over the past several months, I and my staff have been in regular communication with The Foodbank to secure much needed food, provide information on our service numbers and the increase in demand for emergency food assistance, and to receive support from The Foodbank during this very challenging time. Giraffe Laugh has been serving the Boise and Garden City community for 31 years and we are proud to partner with The Idaho Foodbank.

Giraffe Laugh provides early care and education to young children by ensuring school readiness, empowering families and building strong futures. A large part of our work is to prevent food insecurity in the children and families we serve. Through our partnership with the Idaho Food Bank we are able to have onsite food pantries at all four of our locations, giving families access to nutritious food. We have seen the need for food assistance increase exponentially at our centers as a result of COVID-19.

It is critical that we assure the flow of food to families, seniors and children struggling under the weight of the pandemic and the many unexpected changes that are causing households to struggle including unemployment, underemployment, childcare challenges and medical challenges. Even brief times of inadequate nutrition can have a negative impact on the health and wellbeing of individuals, and in turn, our communities and state. The Idaho Foodbank serves a critical role in providing nutritious food across our state and into local communities with and without nonprofit partners.

Thank you for your consideration of supporting hunger relief in Idaho during this critical and unprecedented time. I look forward to continuing to work with The Idaho Foodbank to assure our communities are cared for now and through the recovery.

Sincerely,

Lori Fascilla
Executive Director

To Governor Little's Coronavirus Financial Advisory Committee,

As the President of the Giving Cupboard, I would like to express my strong support for the Idaho Foodbank's request for support of COVID relief funds through the state of Idaho to support hunger relief across our state. Over the past several months, I and my staff have been in regular communication with The Foodbank to secure much needed food, provide information on our service numbers and the increase in demand for emergency food assistance, and to receive support from The Foodbank during this very challenging time. The Giving Cupboard has been serving Jefferson County for 3 years and we are proud to partner with The Idaho Foodbank.

We went from a Choice Food Pantry to a Mobile Pantry, literally overnight, when COVID restrictions prevented us from serving our clients inside our building. Since March we have seen a steady increase in new client numbers. Prior to COVID, we were serving 55 -65 families weekly. We currently see 100 - 115 families per week. Average family size is 5 people. Providing food for 2000 plus Idahoans each month puts great demands on our volunteer staff and resources.

It is critical that we assure the flow of food to families, seniors and children struggling under the weight of the pandemic and the many unexpected changes that are causing households to struggle including unemployment, underemployment, childcare challenges and medical challenges. Even brief times of inadequate nutrition can have a negative impact on the health and wellbeing of individuals, and in turn, our communities and state. The Idaho Foodbank serves a critical role in providing nutritious food across our state and into local communities with and without nonprofit partners.

Thank you for your consideration of supporting hunger relief in Idaho during this critical and unprecedented time. I look forward to continuing to work with The Idaho Foodbank to assure our communities are cared for now and through the recovery.

Sincerely,

Naomi R Schilling

To Governor Little's Coronavirus Financial Advisory Committee,

As the Director of the Moscow Food Bank, I would like to express my strong support for the Idaho Foodbank's request for support of COVID relief funds through the state of Idaho to support hunger relief across our state. Over the past several months, I and my staff have been in regular communication with The Foodbank to secure much needed food, provide information on our service numbers and the increase in demand for emergency food assistance, and to receive support from The Foodbank during this very challenging time. The Moscow Food Bank has been serving the North Idaho City of Moscow for 40 years and we are proud to partner with The Idaho Foodbank.

It is critical that we assure the flow of food to families, seniors and children struggling under the weight of the pandemic and the many unexpected changes that are causing households to struggle including unemployment, underemployment, childcare challenges and medical challenges. Even brief times of inadequate nutrition can have a negative impact on the health and wellbeing of individuals, and in turn, our communities and state.
